Facing Death . . . with open eyes

“GEM-LIKE, focused and pure.”

Brad Stuart, MD, Sutter VNA and Hospice

In an age of spiraling medical costs and heroic efforts to extend life, this film is a provoking look at living with dying. Writer/lecturer Ram Dass, author & Buddhist Rick Fields, collage artist Robin Inman, and AIDS patient Tighe Foley share their journeys of facing death with awareness. A lyrical tapestry of words, images and sound, that takes the viewer on a inspiring journey of mind and spirit.

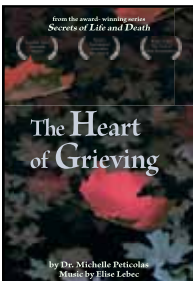

Caring for Dying: the art of being present

“EVOCATIVE, MOVING, INSPIRATIONAL . . .”

Michael Stephens, MFT, Hope Hospice

Searching for people gifted in the art of caregiving, the filmmaker discovers, more than a primer for success, the recipe for forgiveness. Marcia and Rick struggle with their new relationship while one of them readies to die; Christine’s mother and stepfather are dying, but she can only care for one of them; and in one long night Frank Ostaseski discovers he is more than just “Mr. Hospice.”

The Heart of Grieving

“A WORK OF ART. . .”

Carolyn North, author, Death the Experience of a Lifetime

With San Francisco’s Day of the Dead as a visual backdrop, the film explores the arduous, at times ecstatic, process of grieving through four stories: Dan, a no-nonsense guy who gets caught up in the mystery of his wife’s dying; Marcia, a spiritually-guided newly-wed and widow; Gladys, the compassionate church-friend of a man dying of AIDS and abandoned by his family; and Geoff, an only-son who loses his mother to cancer and his father to suicide.
